

Please join us at this must-attend program for employers seeking to better understand California's unique employment laws. Betsy Johnson, a shareholder in Ogletree Deakins' Los Angeles office, has represented employers in California since 1985 and will offer invaluable insights during her presentation. A networking cocktail hour will follow immediately afterward.

Are You Kidding Me! A Primer and Update on California Employment Law

Presenter: Betsy Johnson

There is nothing amusing about the twists and turns of California employment law. Compliance with the myriad of California's employment laws can be tricky for even the most experienced in-house counsel and HR professionals. There are thousands of Labor Code provisions that regulate almost every aspect of the employment relationship, and the California courts continue to muddy the waters. If your company already has employees in California or is thinking about hiring employees in the Golden State, you must be prepared to deal with the complexities of California law. This primer on California employment law will focus on the legal issues that create the most headaches for in-house counsel and HR professionals.
