BAD (BURNOUT, ADDICTION, AND DEPRESSION) IS NOT GOOD FOR YOU

Statistics suggest that burnout, addiction, and depression are causing devastation in the lives of lawyers, HR professionals, and others in the workplace. The consequences of not appropriately addressing these issues can be far-reaching—from lowered productivity to physiological and psychological suffering. This presentation will detail some of the warning signs that you (or a colleague) might not be coping well with stress, provide steps you can take to inoculate yourself against the deleterious effects of stress, and explain why it matters. This presentation will also discuss how companies are addressing these issues through wellness and other benefit plans, and provide an update on the legal challenges to and recent developments regarding wellness plans.

Presenters: Dennis A. Davis, Ph.D. and
Timothy J. Stanton
