I-9 COMPLIANCE AND WORKSITE ENFORCEMENT IN 2019

The Trump administration has long made worksite enforcement a policy priority. Now, after tripling the number of Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents and taking steps to quintuple the agency's worksite enforcement activities, the administration has substantially reinforced the concept that employers must monitor and police their workforces. This briefing for employers will outline methods for establishing effective compliance programs, options associated with cleaning up problematic I-9 forms, and recent audit and investigation activity by immigration authorities. Finally, the briefing will address developing areas in employment-based immigration enforcement and highlight steps employers should consider taking to ensure they are prepared for a variety of government visitors.
