

Presented by Ogletree Deakins'

NEW ENGLAND OFFICES

You're invited to an informative and educational briefing to address the latest labor and employment law topics impacting New England employers.

TOPIC

As the COVID-19 vaccine becomes more widely available and as governors in the New England states begin to loosen restrictions, more employers are considering reopening their offices and business operations. Some of the issues New England employers are grappling with include when the reopening will occur and what will it look like, whether to have a mandatory or voluntary vaccination policy, how to open safely with a workforce that is not fully vaccinated, and how to deal with employees who do not want to physically return to the workplace. Our experienced panel will discuss all these issues and more.
