Over the last four years, the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) has overruled significant precedents and created new rules, most of which dramatically favor labor unions. The change in administration has created an opportunity to appoint a new general counsel and two new Board members. What changes will these new leaders bring to the NLRB? How quickly will these changes occur, and how will they impact employers? Join this webinar for the latest updates from the NLRB and insights into what may lie ahead for your workforce in 2025.
