DESCRIPTION

In the past few years, several infectious disease outbreaks have been in the news, from the Zika epidemic to measles outbreaks, and employers also have to contend with cold and flu season each year. Join this webinar to explore some of the common issues confronting employers when an infectious disease infiltrates the workplace, including working with local health agencies; navigating the requirements of the Occupational Safety and Health Act, the Americans with Disabilities Act, and other federal laws; weighing the pros and cons of employer-sponsored vaccination programs; and managing employee notification concerns. Our speakers will also address planning and prevention, industry vulnerability assessments, and employee and manager education.
