DESCRIPTION

In this special 90-minute webinar, the speakers will discuss the pros and cons of voluntary and mandatory COVID-19 vaccination policies, as well as the steps employers across all industries are taking now to plan, design, and implement such policies for their workplaces. The federal government and courts have recently outlined the key elements of a lawful vaccination policy and clarified the narrow exemptions that employees may invoke to abstain from vaccination. In addition, state and local governments have weighed in with sometimes conflicting guidance, prohibitions, and requirements as to what organizations can do regarding vaccination policies, masking, and other safety protocols for employees, customers, clients, guests, and patients. Moreover, several national medical professional associations are calling for employers to implement stronger measures to incentivize and mandate vaccination of workers in healthcare settings. Don't miss your shot to hear the latest developments and practical considerations regarding vaccination policies and how to grapple with medical and religious exemption requests.
