Join us for the third installment of our webinar series, where we explore how barrier analysis—an approach informed by Title VII of the Civil Rights Act using both qualitative and quantitative methods—can help mitigate legal risks throughout the employment life cycle. In this webinar, the speakers will discuss strategies to ensure equal employment opportunities in the administration of performance and compensation, particularly in light of the current administration's focus on merit-based practices. The speakers will demonstrate how to design a privileged analytical framework for performance and compensation practices to identify and mitigate legal risks. They will also share best practices and practical considerations to support defensible and compliant decisions in compensation and workforce management.
