DESCRIPTION

The Supreme Court of California recently issued its third key decision on employee meal and rest breaks, making the topic among the most highly litigated and controversial compliance topics in California employment law. Join two of our experienced California wage and hour practitioners as they examine the California Supreme Court's recent ruling in Naranjo v. Spectrum Security Services, Inc., and prior decisions in Donohue v. AMN Services, LLC and Ferra v. Loews Hollywood Hotel, LLC. Each of these cases significantly increase the liability risks for California employers who are not able to demonstrate regular compliance with California's complex meal and rest break requirements. The speakers will address the practical implications of these decisions, and will offer practical strategies to enable California employers to manage the rising liability risks.
