DESCRIPTION

Our I-9 compliance webinar series is designed for attorneys and HR professionals who are new to the employment eligibility verification process, or who simply want to review the basics. In part four of the series, the speakers will discuss the role of the Department of Justice's (DOJ) Immigrant and Employee Rights Section (IER) in enforcing the anti-discrimination provision of the Immigration and Nationality Act. The speakers will outline the four types of discrimination the IER oversees, review recent cases, and provide practical tips on how to avoid the pitfalls of being "too strict" with work authorization documents. The speakers will also discuss the unique interplay and friction between citizenship status discrimination and ITAR/EAR export control compliance concerns.
