DESCRIPTION

Immigration law is constantly evolving, and during the pandemic a new set of challenges has emerged. This webinar will focus on strategies that employers can utilize to navigate the remote work landscape effectively while maintaining compliance with immigration regulations and minimizing disruption to sponsored foreign national employees. The speakers will present options for immigration sponsorship in a tight labor market and provide guidance on managing this growing need. The speakers will also discuss employment eligibility verification (Form I-9), including current verification policies and steps employers may want to consider taking prior to the expiration of these policies. Finally, the speakers will answer common questions associated with COVID-19-related international travel bans, including who is exempt, what exceptions exist, how to apply for a waiver, and what options there are for employers with employees stranded outside the United States.
