DESCRIPTION

The California legislature passed several significant employment-related bills this session, and Governor Newsom has already signed some of those into law. Though the legislative session has ended, there are more employment-related measures awaiting the governor's signature. In this month's webinar, Charles Thompson and Leslie Wallis will provide an update on this active legislative session, as well as review California's new regulations regarding criminal history, the EEOC's strategic enforcement plan, and recent disability and accommodation case law developments. Karen Tynan, the West Coast chair of Ogletree's Workplace Safety and Health Practice Group, will discuss the proposed workplace violence protection law.
