Stay up to date on the latest California employment law developments in our recurring webinar series with Charles and Leslie. In our April edition, the speakers will discuss several bills pending before the California State Legislature, including a measure proposing a 32-hour workweek. They also will address the California Department of Fair Employment and Housing's new draft regulations concerning the use of "automated-decision systems," such as algorithms that screen resumes and face and/or voice recognition software. In addition, the speakers will explain recent revisions to California's COVID-19 Prevention Emergency Temporary Standards. Finally, they will answer questions from last month's webinar and review some tricky leaves of absence issues and recent California employment law decisions.
