DESCRIPTION

On December 20, 2023, the Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) issued its much-anticipated final rule regarding safety plans for powered haulage. However, the rule still leaves a lot of questions unanswered, including procedures for maintenance and repair, miner training, and how operators are to consider the use of current and future technology when making their safety plans. Join speakers from Ogletree's Workplace Safety and Health Practice Group as they discuss MSHA's new rule and its requirements and how to plan for compliance.
