Valentine’s Day is almost here, making it the perfect time to address the challenges that come with workplace romances. While love can flourish in the workplace, it can also lead to significant legal, professional, and public relations issues. Employers must ensure a harassment-free workplace, which can become complicated by personal relationships. This webinar will offer effective strategies for minimizing the legal risks associated with workplace romances, including establishing clear anti-harassment policies, conducting employee training, and exploring the potential benefits of “love contracts.”
