DESCRIPTION

The Biden administration recently declared the monkeypox outbreak a public health emergency, and reported cases continue to trend upward. This webinar will address workplace policies regarding privacy, hygiene, travel, vaccine distribution, and protective gear that may come into play given the nature of monkeypox and its characteristics. The speakers will offer key takeaways for employers across industries, including special considerations in the retail and healthcare spheres. Topics will also include the use of leave and obligations that employers may have under the Americans with Disabilities Act, the Family and Medical Leave Act, and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration's workplace safety requirements.
