

From Policy to Protection: Building a Multistate Workplace Violence Prevention Program

April is Workplace Violence Prevention Month, making it an ideal time for organizations to review and strengthen their prevention efforts. As workplace violence prevention requirements continue to expand, multistate employers face growing challenges to maintain consistent programs across locations. This webinar will explore key considerations for developing and implementing a workplace violence prevention program that can operate effectively across multiple jurisdictions, including states with specific regulatory requirements such as California, while also aligning with broader workplace safety expectations. The speakers will discuss practical approaches to program structure, risk assessments, reporting procedures, incident documentation, and employee training, as well as common challenges organizations encounter when implementing prevention programs across multiple states.
