DESCRIPTION

Multistate employers face the daunting task of keeping up with a growing patchwork of employment laws on the federal, state, and local levels. In the first of our new multistate three-part series, we discuss the issues that emerge when expanding to new jurisdictions, including implementing restrictive covenant agreements to protect proprietary business information; trade secrets; and relationships with customers, prospective customers, employees, vendors, and other business partners. During this webinar, Dee Anna Hays, chair of the firm's Multistate Advice and Counseling Practice Group, and Caren Marlowe, a shareholder in the firm's Unfair Competition and Trade Secrets practice, will share insights into how employers can structure and update multistate handbooks and business protection agreements in today's workplace.
