DESCRIPTION

On January 26, 2023, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) announced a significant expansion of its “instance-by-instance” citation policy. The revamped policy, which is scheduled to go into effect in March, will allow OSHA to issue citations for each instance of noncompliance in certain cases the agency identifies as involving “high-gravity” serious violations. This change may lead to the issuance of more citations with significantly increased penalties. In this interactive webinar, members of Ogletree’s Workplace Safety and Health Practice Group will explore the potential impact of this policy on the OSHA inspection process, best practices to reduce risk, and penalties employers may face.
