DESCRIPTION

South Carolina was among the first states to begin reopening its economy amidst the COVID-19 pandemic. Now that several weeks have passed, where do things stand? In this webinar, the speakers will cover the key developments South Carolina employers need to know in light of the state's reopening, from common challenges employers are encountering with returning employees to work to safety and screening considerations. The speakers will also discuss practical differences in the regions of the state and in various industries so that employers can best navigate the "new normal."
