DESCRIPTION

Companies are facing a plethora of employment and workplace problems related to the national supply chain crunch. The challenges include hiring, onboarding, worker shortage and retention, unpredictable scheduling, workplace safety, and wage and hour issues. Manufacturers in particular have struggled with staffing throughout the pandemic, and unpredictable supply chains have only made things worse. Unfortunately, the pandemic has not slowed the number of claims and lawsuits brought by workers challenging employer staffing models, workplace safety practices, and compensation and payroll practices. This webinar will address manufacturers' legal pain points and offer practical tips on managing current legal challenges.
