DESCRIPTION

Managing unfair labor practice (ULP) charges provides excellent experience for new labor practitioners. In the third installment of the Labor Law Foundation series, the speakers will discuss how ULP charges are handled, how National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) regional directors investigate allegations, how to interact with Board agents, how to evaluate requests for affidavits, and how to submit evidence through position statements, documentary evidence, and other means. The speakers will also discuss the dismissal of ULP charges and appeal rights, as well as what happens if a regional director finds merit, including settlement issues and options. This session will provide attendees with practical tips for handling their next ULP charge.
